CRAB PASTE

Notes

Crab paste is a family recipe passed down on my Dad's side. I remember when I was younger, my Dad would regularly visit my grandparents across the country and come back with a jar full of off-white, yellowy mush. Yum!

When I was in middle school, I got the chance to help. It was long, time-consuming work. However, I still remember that time fondly. Taking part in a family tradition like that made me feel like I was somehow helping to preserve the recipe.

This is a way of doing that too. Enjoy!

Step

Directions

Steam your crabs

- Grandpa (Ye Ye) says blue crabs are the best to use for crab paste
- They have to be female, too...
- Even better if they have eggs... u.h...

he was really particular about getting them and said it was difficult... Possibly because of how important female blue crabs are to the environment

Twist off the legs and pick out the meat

• Tools can make getting meat out of the legs easier!

Remove the apron and pry the top shell from the body

Remove the meat from the body

Step

Directions

Give the meat to your Nai Nai and Ye Ye
